The Noyes Museum of Art Vision

The Noyes Museum of Art of Stockton University will be recognized for creating a thriving cultural environment for experiencing the arts in the southern New Jersey region.

The Noyes Museum of Art of Stockton University

The Noyes Museum of Art of Stockton University offers several locations in Southern New Jersey, providing access and support to the arts and artists of the region and beyond. A source of inspiration and enjoyment for enthusiasts of the arts, from residents of the community, students and faculty of the university, to visitors to the shore and Pine Barrens, the Noyes Museum serves the entire South Jersey area. In 2010, the Noyes partnership with Stockton University began as a natural extension of Stockton's commitment to the area's cultural scene. The Noyes Museum formally became a part of Stockton University in 2016. Home to one of the area's top performing arts centers, Stockton has its own art gallery, a growing visual arts program, and a Bachelor of Fine Arts degree is among the many courses of study. Through Communications Studies, Historical Studies, Language and Culture Studies, Literature and Philosophy, Stockton is serving the arts and humanities in southern New Jersey.

Today, The Noyes Museum maintains its founders' dedication to preserving, highlighting, interpreting, and celebrating the arts through its dynamic locations across southern New Jersey.
